WERE THEY KILLED?

Two Tramps Supposed to Be Buried Under Fallen Walls.

Firemen Search the Ruins Without Success.

They Will Make Further Efforts to Learn the Truth,

Chief Gicquel and two fire companies turned put at 2 o'clock this morning and worked till Sawn to rescue two rumored tramps who were supposed to have been buried in the débris of a fallen stable.

At 1,45 o'clock this morning Capt. Mo-Namarra, of Engine Company 26, telephoned to Battalion Chief Giequel that a building had fallen in West Thirty-seventh street and that citizens reported there were people buried in the the disaster. It was found that the roof and walls of an old stable, recently partly destroyed by fire, had fallen down in Thirty-seventh street, near Broadway.

This blackened old stable had been the lodging-house for houseless and homeless wanderers, and it was rumored in the neighborhood that some wanderers of the city had gone to step there the previous evening.

With lanterns flashing here and there in the darkness. Chief Gioquel and his men went hearily to work in the darkness with pick and are to dig out the unfortunates who might be buried under the ruins.

They worked hard for two hours and found no indications that any one had been killed.

About 4 o'clock this morning a man came along who said he had seen two forlorn trainings enter the old stable about 10 clock at night, and that the training who used the place as a hotel were in the habit of sleeping in the mangers.

On receiving this news Chief Gicquel was encouraged to work two hours longer.

A thorough examination was made, but no one was discovered under the debris, and Chief Gicquel was satisfied that the guests of the stable had escaped from it before it fell. The firemen was home tired out.

Another search will be made by the firemen had escaped from it before it fell. The firemen west home tired out.

Another search will be made by the firemen this afternoon.

'It is lucky," said Chief Gicquel, "that the stable didn't fall in the daytime, for it might have killed people who were passing."

The building had been weakened by people taking boards from it for kindling and fire wood.

ARGUING FOR THE MURNAMES.

Lawyer Stockler Says Their Denteution as Paupere la lliegal. the United States Circuit Court to-day

Judge Lacombe listened to arguments on the question of the detention of Patrick and Margaret Muraame and their eight children. The family arrived on the steamer Wyoming on the 10th inst. and were to have been returned as pauper emigrants on the same vessel a couple of days ago, when Civil Justice Steckler, acting as counsel for Commissioner Rorke, of the Irish Emigration Society, obtained a writ of the Irish Emigration Society, obtained a writ of habeas corpus.

Lawyer Kelly, who represented the Committee, contended that the detention of the emigrants was in conformity with the law. Judge Stecker, on the contrary, said that the proceedings were not regular, as it was the action of members of the Board and not of the Board itself.

This Lawyer Kelly admitted, but said that it would be impossible to hold meetings every time such a case presented itself.

Judge Lacombe decided that the Committee had no jurisdiction to act without the authority of a full Board, but said he would suspend the case until Friday, when the Board will have met in the mean time.

Mrs. Glennon Terribly Cut by a Sauce Throws by Her Husband.

her right temple, which she said was inflicted by her husband. Peter Glennon, who struck her with a saucer.

The cut was three inches long and severed a blood-ressel. Several physicians to whom the bolice applied refused to come until Dr. Keating was found and he dressed the wound.

In the mean time the woman nearly bled to death. She refused to go to the hospital, though very weak. The doctors say she is likely to die. Glennon was arrested and held.

Although he is chary of announcing this fact to press representatives, he has not been so care ful with other people, A day or two ago he declared to an ex-Alderman:

'I am going to fight for the place. The constitution is with me and I shall win."

Mr. Smith is very sanguine of his ability to remain Commissioner of Public Works under Mr. Hewitt's warrant of authority, which made him Commissioner for the unexpired term of Gen. John Newton.

Mayor Grant and Mr. Gilroy, who will probably be his appointee to succeed Smith, are not at all alarmed at Commissioner Smith's anounced intention of fighting, and they evidently think the fight will be short and blood-less.

They, with the other Tammany Hall leaders, have all abiding faith in the constitutionality of the Consolidation act, which has been sustained time and again in the courts.
By that act Smith's term expires May 1.

Schwartz to Be Tried Next Wednesday. Julius Schwartz, the editor of Husparia, who ran for Congress last fall, and who was indicted for forgery on the complaint of his father-inlaw, was arraigned before Judge Cowing in General Sessions to-day. His counsel, William F. Howe, and Assistant District-Attorney Goff agreed upon Wednesday next for his trial and Schwartz was returned to the Tombs.

DID SHE FIRE THE FLAT?

MARY'S MISTRESS DOESN'T BELIEVE IN

THE GIRL'S GUILT. The Detectives Are Confident That the

Servant Made All Three Attempts Out of Revenge. She Is Taken to Court and Committed to the House of Mercy on Mary Boss, otherwise Minnie May, who was charged with stealing a twenty-dollar cloak, and was suspected of having made three attempts to set fire to the Chenango Flats, 350 Lenox ave-nue, was brought before Justice Murray in the Harlem Police Court this morning and committed to the House of Mercy.

She was committed on the complaint of her mother, Anna Boss, who charged her with moral deprayity. Mrs. Boss said that she had not seen her daughter before in over a year. The charge of stealing was not pressed, and 10 is likely that the case against her for suspected arson will be dropped. According to Detectives Price and Mott, of the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, there have been three attempts to set fire to the building.

The first was made in a pile of rubbish in the basement, the second was in a box of hay in the cellar, and the last, which occurred on Friday morning, on the second flight of stairs.

Oil had been scattered around and a match applied. The fire was discovered, however, before any scrious damage had been done.

The detectives claim that they have a chain of circumstantial evidence which is conclusive as to Mary's guilt. They declars that the gir bought all of Mrs. Mersercan's medicine, and that the bottle containing the oil found on the stairs corresponds with those in the Mersercan apartments. One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, stairs corresponds with those in found on the stairs corresponds with those in the Mersereau apartments.

As a motive for the crime, they say that she has a vindictive nature, having on several occasions thrown sakes down the stairs at other girls living in the house, and that she has borne a bad record.

The girl told them that she had no relatives and tried to conceal her identity under the name of Minnie May.

Mrs. Mersereau, with whom Miss May, or, rather, Bass lived, declares that the girl is more sinned against than sinning. She says that she has frequently left the girl alone in the flat with all the silverware and as high as $100 in cash, and has never missed a single article.

Mrs. Mersereau thinks that the people in the house made trouble for the girl because she attended to her duties and refused to tell the family's business to the other servants. She is perfectly willing to take her back, and is going to hire a house on the 1st of May, and see if she cannot obtain the girl's release.

The clock alleged to have been stolen was hired from a costumer and the girl neglected to return it, intending to wear it once more before doing so.

hired from a costumer and the girl neglected to return it, intending to wear it once more before doing so.

In regard to the family being the only ones in the house who used kerceeve, she says that she has seen certain others travel out and in with cans of oil in their hands.

The girl looks old for her age and is not bright. In regard to the story that she fled when about to be arrested. Mrs. Mersereau says that a summons to appear before the Fire Marshal frightened her to such an extent that she hid herself on the roof from Bunday afternoon until Tuesday morning, when on account of exhaustionable was forced to come down.

After Justice Rurray had disposed of the case this morning the girl broke into tears and kissed her mother farswell. She was then taken to the House of Mercy, where she will remain, unless firs Mersereau, her late employer, who believes thoroughly in her innocence, is successful in obtaining her release.

MACY

PRETTY MRS. AH DAM.

The Girlish Belle of Mott Street and Her Wenithy Husband.

(New York Letter to Washington Star.) One of the prettiest New York girls I have seen for a long time is Mrs. Ah Dam. Although she is married, Mrs. Ah Dam still looks and acts like a girl, and in truth, her husband tells me, she is only sixteen. Mr. Ah Dam is the richest Chinese groceryman in New York, and Mrs. Ah Dam is the third wife he has brought out from China. Mr. Ah Dam never let anybody see his first two wives, but he has become so thoroughly American since getting the third that he takes an honest pride in showing her off, even to strangers. He didn't wait an instant when I asked an introduction, but called in a clerk, to whom he said a few peremptory tea-chest words, and we proceeded to climb the stairs to his "flat" on the fifth floor of a Mott street tenement. I never saw a cleaner place. There were no lath and plaster, but plain pine partitions, unpainted and as clean as

There were no lath and plaster, but plain pine partitions, unpainted and as clean as wax.

At his own floor we entered, and after announcing me to his wife first he led me into her apartment. Mrs. Ah Dam is about four and a half feet in height, rosy and round, with the sort of rosebud mouth that we see in small children, but which I had never before remarked in a wife, no matter how young. Her complexion is golden and the red in her cheeks makes it exquisite, while her hair, brushed back from her forehead, is as black as night and is caught in a broad knot behind, pierced with two gold pins. Her hands are tiny things, pink on the inside and golden without, and her feet, which are not deformed, but exquisitely shaped, are no longer than my thumb, I will swear. She doesn't walk on them, but toters around the room a good deal like the little sandpipers that throug the shores of the Potomac opposite Washington. She was dressed in a red silk gown, stiff and shiny, and wore white stockings that showed just a bit above her cute little brown slippers with znow-white soles. Mrs. Ah Dam doesn't speak any English, so my compliments were evidently wasted on her. And once when I thought her husband was interpreting to her one of the pretty things I had endeavoved to say, she frowned at me in such a forbidding way that I just dropped the complimentary business then and there. Barring the frown, I think Mrs. Ah Dam is one of the sweetest New York girls I ever met.

NEW REGIME AT THE TREASURY.

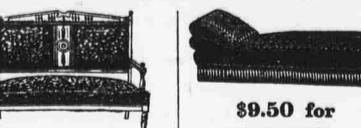

but Makes Them All Give Bonds. Ellis H. Roberts, Assistant United States Treasurer, said to an Evening World reporter to-day that he had established the principle of requiring his assistants to give bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties for the faithful discharge of their duties at the Sub-Treasury because he himself has to give a four-hundred-thousand-dollar bond to the Government. The cashier and the Deputy Assistant Treasurer have given bonds of $50,000 each, and all the other employees will give bonds from that amount down to $1,000, according to the position held by each man.

Mr. Boberts said: "I don't feel any lack of confidence in any of my subordinates, but this seems to be a policy adopted in other offices of the Government, among them the Custom-House and the Post-Office."

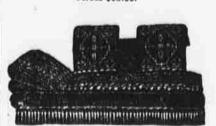

Bince coming into office Mr. Roberts has paid over to the Clearing-House officers $2,582,-817. d1 in gold certificates, and he has received from the Treasury Department at Washington a draft for $800,000 and from the Custom-House $658,000 in deposits.
